Child-Friendly Complaints Process

It is okay to complain

It is normal to feel worried or not sure about making a complaint. Children and young people are often nervous because they are not sure what type of response they may get. They might be worried about getting into trouble, or that nothing might be done to help.

This guide is here to help you understand our complaints process, and assure you that we will try to help solve your complaint. It is okay to complain, and you will not get into trouble for complaining.

When should I complain?

There are all sorts of valid reasons to complain. For example:

- You might be unhappy about the way you have been treated.
- Someone made a mistake and won't fix it.
- You may be feeling unsafe and people won't listen.
- Someone has been hurting you, or your feelings, or has been acting inappropriate with you.
- You might have had a disagreement that is causing you stress.

You can get support for your complaint

If it makes things easier for you, you can talk to a parent, carer, friend or someone you trust and ask them to help you with your complaint. They can even be with you when you complain.

Getting your complaint ready

Think about what you are not happy about and how this has affected you. Also decide what you think should be done about it. This will help you when you have to talk about it. You may need to tell a couple of people in the process, so it will also help you remember what you've said before.

Where and how to Complain

Talk to the Child Safety Officer in our organisation. If you don't know who that is, just check this webpage (or ask someone to check for you): <https://www.rabbinicalcollege.edu.au/faculty>

If you prefer to speak with another adult in our organisation, you can. Every adult who works here must help you make your complaint and give it to the right person.

If you prefer not to talk face-to-face, you can write a letter. Write "Child Safety Officer" on the envelope and leave it in the administration office. Or you can send an email to admin@rabbinicalcollege.edu.au. Or you can use any of our other contact details here: <https://www.rabbinicalcollege.edu.au/Contact>

Be calm and ask questions

When you make your complaint, try to be calm and polite, even if you feel upset. Staff of the organisation must also treat you with respect.

Ask as many questions as you like. You may want to know:

- How will they keep your complaint private?
- What will happen next?
- Who will get back to you and your support person?
- When will they get back to you?
- If you're not happy about the result of your complaint what is the next step – who will review your complaint then?

Keep notes

Write down who you speak or write to, the dates, anything they say they will do and the date they say they will get back to you. This will help you keep track of things. You can also write down how you feel about the complaint process. This may be useful later.

What will happen when I make a complaint?

The people who are responsible for receiving complaints from children and young people should:

- listen and be respectful when you are telling them about your concerns.
- be understanding and encourage you to explain your situation in your own time.
- believe what you are saying, take it seriously and note it down.
- be helpful and offer advice and information about the complaints process, what their next steps will be and what you can expect to happen.
- take action, do what they said they would do and act on your complaint.
- keep you informed by contacting you when they say they will and let you know of progress.
- keep the information you share with us private. We will tell you when we need to share the information with other organisations in order to help protect you.

It's okay to tell an adult politely if you don't think they are doing these things well. Tell them how you feel.

We have a detailed process* that our staff must follow to ensure that your complaint is addressed properly. We will keep you informed of the progress and outcome of your complaint.

* All of the details of this process can be found in our Child Safety Grievance Policy and Procedure which is available at <https://www.rabbinicalcollege.edu.au/grievancepolicy>.
